

Possible Complications and Risks for Injury in the Lateral Position

- Excess pressure on dependent side
- Patient movement
- Brachial plexus injury
- Prolonged surgery in the lateral position may lead to
 - local muscle compression with ischemia and subsequent reperfusion injury, leading to compartment syndrome or rhabdomyolysis
 - vascular congestion and relative hypoventilation in the dependent lung

